

Making it through revision

There's no right or wrong way to revise for your exams – everyone has their own methods and style. If you're stuck for inspiration, here are some ideas.

Use practical memory aids like flash cards, mind maps, infographics and videos, as well as reading and writing notes

Use a calendar to keep track of important exam dates and deadlines

Keep your phone and social media off, so you can concentrate

De-clutter your study space

Schedule plenty of breaks – take a walk, listen to some music, watch a funny video

Spend time making a revision plan so you can see what you're going to revise and when

Talk to your teachers if you're struggling with a particular topic – they're there to help you

Explain key theories to a friend or family member – this should help you remember them and structure your responses

Test yourself and ask someone else to test you as well

Reward yourself once you've finished a topic or revision session

Get plenty of sleep! The more rested you are, the better your memory will be

REMEMBER Feeling stress and anxiety is understandable.

You're not alone if you're struggling – make sure you talk to your family or support network to help you. Visit aqa.org.uk/exam-stress for tips and techniques to guide you through this time.

Keeping calm on exam day

Eat the right foods – a lack of energy can affect your concentration

Get your stationery together – bring spare pens/pencils, a pencil eraser and a calculator if it's allowed. A clear pencil case or plastic bag is fine to use

Bring a bottle of water so you don't get thirsty half way through

Arrive on time – ideally 10 – 15 minutes before the start of the exam

Don't let other students make you stressed while you are waiting to go in – you're on your own journey

Don't bring your phone with you

No matter how tempting, don't talk to other students once you go into the exam room – this could be classed as misconduct, even if you're not talking about the subject of the exam

Read the instructions on the front of the exam paper carefully

Once the exam starts, read through the whole paper before answering anything – you'll be able to see how much time you'll need to answer each question and plan your time effectively

If you feel unwell or need to go to the toilet, put your hand up so the invigilator can help you

Look for the command words. Identify key words before you answer the question

So the day is here. You've studied, had a good night's sleep and you're ready to go. Here's some advice to help get you through the day.

REMEMBER Your examiners want you to do well.

They're real people who have sat exams before and they understand how nerve-wracking and stressful the experience can be. Visit aqa.org.uk/exam-day for lots of help and guidance about exam days.
